Chief Engineer's Report

TO THE SELECTMEN OF PETERBOROUGH, N. H.:

Gentlemen:

As Chief of the Fire Department I wish to submit the following report from March 8, 1932 to January 31, 1933.

The department responded to 7 alarms of fire; there were 32 still alarms. New equipment purchased 12 coats for firemen. A night man has been hired to stay at Fire Station from 9 p. m. to 6 a. m. At West Peterborough the company has been reduced to 5 men, the janitors' service has also been done away with at that place. The department is certainly lacking in having a sufficient amount of good hose to be used with the pumps having only 600 ft. of real good hose; the other 3000 ft. are single jacket hose (linen) and will not stand the pressure. I believe the town should purchase enough double jacket rubber lined hose to replace the linen hose now being carried on the pumper and should purchase at least 300 ft. each year until all the linen hose has been replaced.

As Forest Fire Warden, the department was called out 5 times; the loss of timber was small.

I wish to thank everyone who helped the department during this time and especially the telephone operators for their valuable service, always cheerfully given.

Respectfully submitted,

MARTIN A. HAFELI

Chief

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS

TO THE PETERBOROUGH SCHOOL BOARD:

The usual statistical summaries have been placed in your hands showing the results of your policies for the last five years. You lack no data which is given either town or city school authorities to be of assistance to them in arriving at their decisions in behalf of the children.

We call attention to the following major items of interest:

1. Teacher loads have been increased to the maximum, both as to number of periods per week and actual pupils under control.

2. The rating of the high school, both by the state department and the surveys, has been made known to you and is very gratifying.

3. The holding power of the high school has more than trebled in five years and Peterborough is one of six towns and cities in New Hampshire which lead the rest of the state in its ability to hold children in school through the twelve grades.

4. Departmental cost surveys have been presented showing the very low cost for the high achievement point reached.

In connection with this last comment, it should be noted that those who speak of the discontinuation of a department fail to ask themselves what would be done with the children who were taking this subject.

Of course the only possible answer is, in view of the fact that all teachers are carrying a full pupil load without spare time, that the School Board would at once have to hire another teacher in the place of the one who was not retained if for no other reason than to provide a monitor while these children sit quietly at their desks. There is no way of decreasing the number of teachers except by decreasing the number of local children.

There is absolutely no question but that the most important message that any superintendent of schools can issue is to call attention to the fact that education is, without the slightest doubt, seriously threatened in the United States. Large areas of the United States at present are reverting to worse conditions, as far as child care is concerned, than have existed for fifty years and more.

Editorial comment abroad frankly suggests that the American trend is away from adequate education of youth, and prophesies a large peon class with a small aristocracy.

This pessimistic view of the United States is primarily due to the fact that generally abroad, education, even in these times, is staunchly supported as the sole hope of permanent betterment of world conditions.

With Russia leading the world today in its educational indoctrination of youth for the good of the state, Italy, Germany,

France, and Great Britain are supporting education as never before, in the belief that there is no safety in a state which neglects the indoctrination of youth with the ideals of citizenship.

A distinguishing factor perhaps of European education is its practical thoroughness.

It is not probable that the taxpayer of today is less thoughtful of the children of today. Furthermore, it is the glory of human fatherhood that it not only cares for the immediate physical protection of youth, but places emphasis on an insistence that children shall fare better in a highly competitive world than did their fathers.

For this reason it is at once evident that if, in a national disaster, education is not solidly supported by the parent and taxpayer, it is because education such as the taxpayer received or with which he is acquainted, is one of those things which can be done away with to some degree, or at the least, indefinitely postponed, like dessert in a time of famine.

The flight of time cannot be postponed. Childhood is soon over, like a magnificent episode in a pageant; an episode so exquisitely beautiful as often to be tragically misunderstood.

If the American taxpayer fails to support the continuance and extension of education, it is because he does not believe that in education can be found the answer to the improvement of governments, or the cessation of his worries.

We are, then, driven to the logical belief that education, so far as it has made an impression on a great part of the American citizenry, has left that group in serious doubt as to its worth, either to prevent a calamity to American civilization, or satisfy an individual need.

Up to the point of average costs, few towns or cities have supported education more gladly than has Peterborough. And for this reason, if for no other, it should be of the utmost importance to see to it that the education of Peterborough children is of that sort which will not leave in its wake the same growing sense of discontent that makes non-supporters of education out of so large a group of our educated citizenry.

The appreciation of education is an act of intelligence. But education must have its foundation in a discovered need. An education for the purpose of increasing a highly competitive group is not sound business.

Education grew out of the desire of the common people to improve the chances of their children for places in the sun. Later, it became a hall mark of social standing. It is part of, and integral with our national tradition that the son of the plowman may learn as much as the scion of the oldest and best established family tree. The attempt to equalize the educational opportunity for all children is a part of the boasted sense of American fair play.

It is our opinion that the attention of the parents of the country must immediately be focused on the fundamentals of education as set forth by the founding fathers of these United States; with particular reference to the ideals which they had for American education at the time of the drafting and approval of the American constitution.

The same brains were at work on American education with the hope of its establishment as the solid foundation for American democracy, as drafted and supported the constitution as a basal guide for a citizenry educated for American ideals.

Unfortunately, politics of the revolutionary period and the shortage of educated American teachers, resulted in the establishment of an early educational system too largely based on the British ideas and ideals. From this British ideal the British Empire has largely departed, but to it American education has too closely clung. There is nothing which is American which is so tied by tradition as is American education.

It is therefore, at this time when education stands in America "at its zero hour" right that we should return to a brief study of the fundamentals of education. Let us consider these fundamentals in the light of cold reason, without sentimentality, solely from the needs of American institutions from the point of view of a nation which has for its ideals those which our own constitution sets forth.

The first great need is an intelligent citizenry. Numerous surveys by well qualified groups, social workers, place the general level of intelligence not higher than that of the child in grades 6-8. It should, however, be remembered that children in these grades are entirely amenable to socialization, are capable of sustained effort, and thrill with hero worship. Like sheep, however, they are readily led astray by one of their own number; they are not inclined to think for themselves.

The elevation of general intelligence, if such a thing is possible, is a national aspiration. Unfortunately there is no proof that education develops intelligence, it merely uses it.

Penologists generally are calling the attention of taxpayers to the fact that it costs about $100.00 a year to keep a child in school, against a cost of $300.00 per child in reformatories or jails; with the implication that there is a chance for the lowering of the tax rates in this item. They also call attention to the fact that greater care is given to the inmates of reformatories and prisons than the taxpayer is willing to pay for to safeguard children within the public schools, by continued education.

The fundamental difference in treatment of individuals in schools and in penal institutions is that in the latter class there is a definite attempt to fit the environment to the present needs of the individual in a modern world. The schools, in spite of spasmodic courageous attempts here and there, must largely function in the same manner in which former generations remember them. Within the jails there is emphasis on the now. Within the schools there is forced to be, in too many cases, an insistence on the continuation of the past.

If intelligence is to continue as a factor for safety in government by and for the people, it is certain that education should make use of whatever level of intelligence is discovered for the purpose of acquainting the citizenry with the problems of the present in the hope of avoiding disaster in the future.

The second fundamental is an informable public. Certainly the absolute necessity for reading in order to become educated, or let us say informed, is less than before the radio came into common use. We cannot continue to be so insular minded, so sectionally aggressive, so generally poorly informed, or so consistently misinformed as formerly we have been.

But reading is insistently a part of the need of a democracy in order that it may be informed. It is, however, eminently fair to state that the material which is read and the intelligence of the reader determine the value of the ability to read.

The third fundamental for the safety of a state is a discriminating public which is capable of more than merely informing itself; it must pass judgment upon the reliability of the information. For the least valuable thing in the economic world is an opinion unsupported by data.

Education must develop a citizenry which scrutinizes closely its sources of information. American civilization is still too close to its origin for it seriously to question, until led astray, the actual value of opinions that it hears or reads. It has not been trained to realize that there is no such thing as the successful application of general intelligence to specific problems until the problems are fully comprehended. This is not easily accomplished.

If there is one thing which the public has learned in the last few years, it is that education has not given to anyone the ability to foresee the events of the future except as the logical outcome of present trends of conduct, action, or common ideals. The voices of those who were able to state that certain events must follow certain causes were drowned in the clamor little people attempting to express what were to them new and big ideas quite without foundation and fact.

It is at once apparent that while reading is a fundamental of education, it is necessary for the safety of the state that this reading be done with a correct motive. From the standpoint of the state, the ability to use printed material as a directed tool of the intelligence, is vastly more important than is the reading skill. Otherwise, the ability to read would be merely one means by which a small group could control the rest of the citizenry through propaganda. This is in fact one means used. And more than one leader has fallen because he could not reach the press to state his case.

The intelligent, informable public must be taught how to take its reading:—with a large grain of salt. This too, is a fundamental of education.

It is difficult to comprehend why so much insistence is laid on a knowledge of past events unless an equal insistence on information concerning the present is an integral part of education in a democracy.

The fourth fundamental is that the public must be happy. Discomfort is the seed of revolution. It is watered by the tears of parents for the disappointments, the hunger, and the loss of their children. It is made hardy by the rough or thoughtless treatment of the more fortunate classes. And the crop is harvested by a new group of demagogues who ride into control and fill their own barns in readiness for market.

Food and amusement are the ideals of the average intelligence, like those of the seventh grade child. In the days of decay of the Roman civilization "Panem et Circenses" (bread and games) were of necessity furnished to the clamorous crowds, that the safety of the state might remain for a little while longer. Seek for the facts behind nearly all revolutions and see if the real origin was not unhappiness.

Greed, which is the desire of man to live by predacious activities, by taking from another as much as the other will release with or without bloodshed, can and will be worked out of mankind eventually by sounder business methods. For we are learning that he who does not have cannot become part of a market. It takes so little to make men happy that it is strange that thousands of years have passed and yet there is a world full of heartache!

It is a fundamental of education that the common people, which includes all of us, should learn that happiness does not come from acquisition but from use of personally owned talents which are put to good use. Education which neglects the potentialities of the individual to develop a worthwhile use of his spare time, places that individual too close to the criminal group whose sole idea is acquisition.

The next fundamental is worthy use of spare time. From the dawn of history to the present time, there have been but two outlets for the leisure which man has evolved, by the increasing use of machinery. One outlet is towards craftsmanship; the other is towards crime or vice.

It was the original idea of our founding fathers that American education should stabilize youth, not at caste levels but at ability levels; that each individual should have equal opportunity to develop his talents.

In spite of all warnings for the last twenty years from every possible thoughtful source of authority, a more or less concerted attack on practical education has been made. It has taken real courage on the part of boards of education to establish and maintain equal opportunity for the 80% who will never attend college and who need an entirely different type of training, although their intelligence may be equal or superior to a considerable proportion of the 20% for whom college preparatory classes are maintained.

It is not in accordance with the ideals of the founding fathers that the policies of the public school systems should be dominated by the real needs or social aspirations of pupils preparing for old line education within the old type of college; for the vast majority of the public will not find its happiness in books or in introspective endeavors.

The fascination of creative art, the lure of excitement in crime, are definite factors which must be considered in the education of all individuals. Reformatories, jails, and prisons have been exempted from the attack on the development of manual skills.

Within such institutions the taxpayer gladly supports the training for worthy use of leisure, in the hopes that those who receive that training will make use of it when again admitted to the world. Within such institutions, a balance of education is kept.

An intelligent, informable, discriminating public must be individually shown that above certain minimum standards, it is not acquisition that gives happiness, but worthy use of spare time spent upon investigation, craftsmanship, or in contact with the soil. For there is a dignity that comes from the possession of a plot of ground, and a greatness of spirit from intimate acquaintance with the possibilities thereof.

The public health is of the greatest concern. Beyond the mere loss of income to the state, or to the world of business, because of the decreased purchasing power of the sickly individual, there is the constant threat which the unhealthy body holds over its auto-intoxicated mind. There is the loss of efficiency due to worry of self or those who are still dearer than self. The spread of disease is the most zealous single threat against national safety.

Any education which overlooks the necessity for constant training in prophylaxis, and which fails to see the need for the protection of the well, from the danger arising from the sick, is thereby criminally careless of its duty to the state. The public health is of the greatest concern, and nowhere is it to be more carefully watched over than in the years when the schools are making or breaking the health of the voting public.

The care of child health is a fundamental of education, for the sake of the safety, the very existence of the state.

American ideals such as were expressed by our founding fathers in the preamble of the constitution and in other writings of that period, are not developed in formal recitation periods. The ideals of cooperation, of fair play, are the result of associations for the common good under wise supervision.

Group games, competitive endeavors both of body and mind form the ideal laboratories for the teaching of cooperation and fair play.

No later civilization has arisen which is superior to that of the ancient Greeks. The Greeks believed that the development of the wholesomeness of the body, as a temple in which a righteous spirit might dwell, would make safe a democracy as well as develop art and stimulate ethical trade.

There is no substitute for the fundamentals which competitive games develop in the youth who will later take over the control of the state. And any educational system which fails to include competitive displays of acquired skills is neglecting one of the greatest motives for continuation of education itself. Organized play properly supervised is not only a fundamental of education, but a short-cut to higher standards of civilization.

In order to round out the potentialities of the fundamentals of education, from the standpoint of the ideals of the founding fathers, we find it necessary somewhat to criticize our great divergence from these early standards coupled with the certainty that the taxpaying public feels assured that the focus of attention of education has not been on increasing the welfare of the state.

The taxpaying public has learned that it is as easy to educate an individual out of a job as into an opportunity, but no money was ever wasted which had been spent in developing the capabilities of children to the point where the children hoped to continue in their discovered lines of successful interest. Much of the education we now give could well be left to adult years, and as a matter of fact this is the great international educational trend.

It is becoming annually more demonstrable that there is no social gain in educating a knave to the point where he can outsmart his honest neighbor. There is no safety for a state when personal integrity in official positions is of less possible concern than whether or not the individual tells a story well or plays an excellent card game.

The safety of the state demands just those things which our founding fathers stated were necessary. And to these we must add a unifying factor; that of the much abused "character education." A much preferred term is training in personal integrity. Schools should be maintained not for the purpose of teaching how to get a living, but how to live with a high personal ethic.

There is plenty of need for the pioneer spirit which led and did not follow. Rugged integrity is necessary for effective colonization and without it an established colony will eventually come to a point of serious social suffering.

Peterborough brought to New Hampshire a survey method and followed it with a complete diagnostic and remedial program. It is the earnest hope of supervision that the educational changes occurring in the most progressive and thoughtful educational systems both here and abroad, will receive the support of the citizenry through your leadership.

The organization of the school system should be such as to make use of the immediate values which lie in childhood. Childhood should be recognized as a distinctly different mental condition from that of youth or adults. It has certain values and training which cannot be found later.

In a properly organized school system little is needed except a superior teacher, plenty of objects to handle, to observe and to report upon with a wealth of reference material with which to make certain observations which best coincide with those of other individuals or periods of racial development.

The idea of a core-curriculum is fast gaining headway because of the possibility of thoroughness; for it is apparent to me that thoroughness and knowledge of a few things exceeds in value the smattering knowledge of many things.

It is a most hopeful sign that twenty of the great colleges are re-organizing their entrance requirements and are using their dominating influence to better the education in secondary schools by means of better understanding of children's potentialities and by insistence on the American ideal that there is as much need for the artisan as for the clerk who has a college degree.

The emphasis of education is turning more and more to the standpoint on which Antioch College focuses its attention. There is still need in civilization for honest sweat, for soiled hands, for an intent brain investigating a material world.

The pioneer spirit, courage in adversity, the will to defend right and to suppress wrong, comes out of the soil and the appreciation of honest hard work; not out of an encyclopedia.

The fundamentals of education are not found by learning details, by memorizing formulae, by passing examinations. That type of education which fails to develop personal integrity to encourage a questioning yet open mind in a healthy body, which fails to give as much consideration to the inherent requirements of youth as one gives to the springing crops of grain, which fails to make as much study of the traits of a young human animal as it gives to a study of the requirements of training dogs and colts in their early years in order that they may function well at their appointed tasks; which attempts to pump full rather than to encourage outpouring of useful ideas; which would substitute "book-learning" for constructive training in how to think; which prefers a study of the past to observation of the present and consideration of the future; which points to the glories of wealth and neglects the beauties of life spent in the honest dignity of contented manual labor followed by happy hours spent in worthwhile pursuit—that education is a revolt against sanity, a menace to the American pioneer traditions, and a distortion of the meaning and possibilities of youth.

A core-curriculum plan is approaching with lowered costs and better training in view. It will care more particularly for the individual who will focus his attention on possibilities of service to his state.

This report has been offered as the most important single contribution which supervision can offer to the citizenry of Peterborough, as they desire to build wisdom into healthy bodies and restore to the American citizenry a correct sense of social values which are in the last analysis based upon the personal integrity of the individual voter whose education has been such as to develop courage, intolerance for crime, and vision of what the individual may do to improve his own status because he is making full use of whatever talents may have been entrusted to him.

LAWTON CHASE
Superintendent of Schools

February 11, 1933.

We submit the following summaries of the reports of the Headmaster and Principal to the Superintendent of Schools, to the School Board.

SUMMARY OF HEADMASTER WHITNEY'S REPORT

Many economies have been introduced without lowering the standard of the school this year. The teaching load is abnormally large.

"Throughout all departments in the Peterborough High School building there has been a closer liaison due to the more efficient functioning of the system promulgated by the Superintendent and carried out by the teachers and headmaster of the building. There have been tried various experiments in method and procedure in order to more fully cooperate with the policy of reduced expenditures."

By the introduction of Biology, children would be permitted to follow a five year course provided that their work in the eighth grade showed an aptitude for Science. The value of training in observation and the correlation with other subjects, particularly the social sciences, is stressed.

Social Sciences are presented to emphasize the values resulting from a better understanding of geography and history, for the purpose of bringing about a comprehension of the principles which underlie essential cooperative citizenship. The history is presented from outlines and books sponsored by Harvard and Columbia Universities. Much emphasis is laid on current events with the purpose of motivating a better knowledge of place geography. One basal text book is used in History of Civilization, which is supplemented by much reference material. Contract method of teaching plays an important part in producing efficiency. Economics and Sociology alternate with each other in grades eleven and twelve. The Social Science department is therefore a well rounded one. Geometry has properly been returned to the visual type of outdoor work from which it evolved.

Mathematics is organized in two groups; one directly planned to meet college preparatory requirements, the other meeting state standards with "practical" mathematics being kept alive. The suggestions of the national committee on mathematics and college entrance requirements have been the basis of certain changes in technique. Advanced mathematics following algebra and geometry offers opportunity for college preparatory pupils. Solid geometry and review mathematics is not open to pupils who have failed to show an aptitude for mathematics.

There is an increase in the number of pupils electing Latin. Perhaps this is due to a trend of pupils toward hospital training schools which desire a certain amount of Latin vocabulary.

The commercial department has vitalized the bookkeeping by caring for various accounts kept by school organizations. This department has greatly assisted in many small economies by the preparation of routine forms. Mr. Whitney states that "It is our firm conviction that the work done in Peterborough High School as reported in the annual reports of the State Department of Education was in part responsible for the changes made in the minimum standard requirements."

In the attempt to reduce the costs of the English Department, Mr. Whitney calls attention to the cooperation of the local public library. Credit is given college preparatory students for outside reading and class room reports. The emphasis of the college preparatory English is swiftly turning toward contemporary literature. "This method of presentation of new material calls for a marked degree of teaching technique based upon theories tried and proved. I doubt whether an inexperienced teacher could successfully handle such a method. Undoubtedly the reading of the proposed literature will give the college-calibre student the necessary literary background which the colleges feel essential to successfully orientating the pupil for college work. Much less dissection of the material and more attention to the assimilation of, and appreciation for, good literature has been the aim of the department."

Physical Education. A listing of the various games and exercises is accompanied by the comment that "The values to the pupils cannot be adequately measured. Health habits are established, such as posture, at a period of life when the formative stage of development is most rampant in the lives of these boys and girls. The loss of such opportunities would mean much to each pupil in later life."

Manual Training Department. "Manual Training is offered to Grades VII and VIII. The outstanding projects for Grade VII thus far this year have been boat building, jigsaw puzzles and cut-outs; and simple lathe instruction. For Grade VIII projects of greater difficulty have been studied. Some of the outstanding projects have been articles of convenience for the boy's room and home, book stands, foot stools, tables, plant stands, lathe and jig-saw work. The boys worked with great industry to produce Christmas toys, which were turned over to the Parent-Teacher Association for distribution to the children of the community whose parents could not afford to buy them toys this year. As in former years, the Principal believes that there should be developed in the Peterborough High School a manual arts course for high school pupils who evidence some ability to develop manual skills."

Music Department. "Miss Smith is to be congratulated upon the progress and the evident improvement in this work. She, too, has worked under the handicap of a reduced departmental budget." Due to her ingenuity, there has been no evident curtailment of efficiency. "Enjoyment in singing, one of the major aims of the courses, seems very apparent in the pupils. All of the foremost educators, who are doing any writing at all on this subject, are in agreement as to the part music plays in the normal life of an individual. The theory work in the grades warrants your attention and the commendation of the office."

Reports of other departments have been previously made by Mr. Whitney. The second part of Headmaster Whitney's report calls attention to some of the modern tendencies in education.

"Many of the prominent thinkers of today are advocating more and more strongly the necessity for a reorganization of the old-type school on the basis of a core-curriculum to which a wealth of elective courses is added. The exact content of the core-curriculum varies in one locality with that of another. Each core must be adapted to the section of the country involved. But there is a general agreement in the teaching of studies which deal with giving a training in how people live and live together. All seem to emphasize the importance of developing 'character,' 'personality,' and the training along lines of aptitudes. No longer is there any call for the old line of thought that all pupils should be submitted to the one course in training. Consequently we must constantly be on the alert to properly diagnose and apply remedial measures to any cropping out of anti-social, non-social, or un-social developments in the schools and communities. To quote the famous Babson: 'Subject matter, while having the sanction of tradition and greatly facilitating marking and determining promotion, is but one and possibly a minor one of the results expected from education. Facts good today are abandoned tomorrow. We need not so much to exert emphasis on subject matter, important as its place is, but rather on technic by which we obtain information to solve our problems and to develop habits of working, attitude towards people and problems, character and personality, and other less tangible results.'"

"We find today that the modern thought demands attention to the general principle of guidance-educationally, vocationally, and even now is being hinted the need for proper guidance spiritually."

"I want to show briefly what we are attempting to do to meet these two ideas in the Peterborough High School. These two ideas were given to the teachers at the beginning of the year to emphasize in every way possible through the media of the subject matter they were teaching. I want to point out here some of the guidance attempted by the various teachers. Professionally, as a group, the teachers have considered guidance in its various phases in professional meetings for the last two years. It was evident that the possibility of a professional director of Guidance, known technically as a 'guidance counsellor,' was not possible here, hence the tasks of that office were divided among the class advisors and activity-advisors in particular; and all teachers entered into the scheme generally. The guidance program for the Peterborough High School was reported in detail at Harvard Graduate School of Education and received the stamp of approval of the Department on Guidance before it was tried here. The following abstracts from the teachers' reports show that the system is beginning to operate and will become more valuable as the system gets the opportunity to grow and function locally."

Latin Department:

"Miss Bridey reports: 'I shall consider guidance in my department under the following two headings: the nature of the guidance of pupils through the particular aims of the course itself, and guidance of pupils in the taking of the step necessary upon completion of their course in high school. In the college department this is, in general, to an institution of higher learning.

'Under the first consideration it may be said that the pupil in the Latin course is assisted to understand better and to use more correctly his own language, to acquire more easily the Romance languages, and to appreciate the literary, social and political life of a very great civilization to which we owe much.

'Guidance, in relation to the step which is to follow the completion of high school, has been given by individual conferences with the pupils. Consideration of the talent, interests, aptitudes, and financial situation of the pupil is the basis for whatever help the teacher's experience or training or information may be able to render.' "

"The commercial courses are definitely pre-vocational in character. The teachers here have placed a wealth of material at the disposal of the pupils seeking guidance in those occupations involving a commercial knowledge and particular skill, such as type-writing and shorthand, bookkeeping, and office practice. General business ethics has added character training necessary in these vocations."

"Manual training and mathematics in the Junior High Grades offer many opportunities for guidance, educational and vocational. In manual training the pupil has the opportunity to try out his specific mechanical aptitudes. The handling and use of tools, making and interpreting blueprints, mechanical drawing, designing, will indicate aptitudes which might be further trained. Vocations as a study has a definite place in the junior high program. As yet we have not introduced such a course. It is the recommendation of the Principal that such a course should be added that better work in the guidance program might be done."

"Mr. Clark's report is given in full for its value as a good example of teacher-work in guidance through his subjects. 'By individual conferences with the pupils, by talks with the parents, by trips of various kinds, and by pointing out actual happenings as examples—illustrate the methods by which I have tried to do guidance work.

'For specific cases, I will mention the following experiences:

1. The economics class took a trip to the mill at South Peterborough. Here I was able to point out various reasons why the pupils should endeavor to take up a trade or a profession if they wanted to get away from the type of labor they observed on the trip.

2. A trip to the local National Bank was a good contrast to the above trip, and pointed out the possibilities to anyone who might be interested in this type of career.

3. A few of the boys have been inquiring about state and government aid in agricultural schools.

4. Quite a few of the athletes of the school have been investigating the possibilities of teaching and coaching as vocations.

These inquiries have resulted from the pupil's success in some particular sport or contacts with the principles that produce good sportsmanship and the desire for combat and competition. I feel quite safe in saying that there are a number of boys in Peterborough High School who are gaining an education as a result of interest in athletics.

5. In History, cleverness in making cartoons and history maps has given some pupils a chance to allow their individual talents to come to the front.

6. Trips by the various athletic teams of the high school have broadened nearly all the potential athletes, and the desire to go to Durham or prep school or other higher institutions has resulted from these contacts.

7. By making history active and up-to-date I believe some pupils are getting the desire to visit some day the various places where great people and great events have held the predominating lead.' "

"This report is very valuable from the headmaster's point of view, primarily because it shows that the teacher is contacting the pupils under him in such a way as to assist in placing before the educand material and matter of vital importance to the pupil as he attempts to find himself and judge for what vocation he is qualified.

All courses in Domestic Arts are prevocational or vocational in nature. Here particularly girls have the opportunity to try out their ideas and to find through the exploratory courses their aptitudes for any of the many possibilities along the line of Domestic sciences. In the grade work, cooking and sewing are evidently paramount, but all relating arts and sciences and vocations are opened-up for investigation to satisfy the pupil interest."

Mr. Whitney presents the report of John R. Clark, Director of Athletics:

Basketball: "Three squads totalling about 50 from grades 7-12 participated. At the time of the presentation of the report, the scores totalled for the 7th and 8th grade schedule 41 to 8 in favor of Peterborough. For the second team schedule Peterborough's points were 207 against opponents' 175. The first team schedule: 550 points for Peterborough against 277 for opponents."

Football: "We were fortunate in having very few injuries. During the season only two were injured. We had 28 boys out and I feel as though the sport is beginning to make an impression on the boys as it gives them more personal contact and teaches them to handle themselves in a physical way." The Peterborough team scored 108 points to opponents' 34.

Mr. Clark continues his report: "Financially the season was not a great success, but we continued to try to get as many boys as possible to take part in the sport."

Spring Activities: "In the Spring, we plan to do the following things:

- (1) Volley Ball Tournament.
- (2) Run an exhibition night for the benefit of the needy of the town which will include Boxing, Wrestling, Tumbling, Dances, Marching and Drills.
- (3) Have a baseball team.
- (4) Monadnock Field Day for both high schools and grammar schools."

SUMMARY OF PRINCIPAL McGRATH'S REPORT

Instead of the division of the grades into A and B sections, which doubles the cost for teaching, the principal cares for the remedial work necessary in all grades. Her time is completely filled with this save for three hours and three quarters each week given to conferences with the superintendent or other individuals or to the "carrying out in the individual class rooms of remedial methods which superintendent and principal have agreed upon as profitable to keep the grade as a whole in step with the continual survey which is made."

"At a much lower cost we could present to the pupils a wider and more interesting course in the social sciences; and reading and writing in the lower grades could be still further improved. I refer to equipping at least two rooms, probably one on each floor with shades such that opaque projection could be used. The various small towns and small cities which have turned to this method are able to report savings, paying for the equipment even the first year without in any way reducing the efficiency of the class room work. Various groups within the field of high rating schools which contact some university for guidance as to costs and better method are reporting gains in reading and in memory drills, to such an extent as to make worthless certain established grade standards which had been based on older technique. As a group we respectfully call the attention of the school board to serious consideration of the possibilities of opaque projection from the two points of view which I have outlined."

"Modern plumbing is unquestionably as greatly desired by you as by us."

"It should be remembered that 180 pupils are in this building and that during the winter months a supply of hot water for the purposes of washing would be very desirable. Small hands and faces must be kept clean if for no other reason than to reduce the chances for disease. It is, however, difficult to enforce proper cleanliness when the water is ice cold from the faucet." A storage tank with flue heater is one suggestion.

"Reports from the larger educational centers show an amazing trend toward nature study as at least one solution for stimulation of young minds and the development of worthwhile habits and pursuits. For years we have had series of expensive books following set programs of study of nature. It seems strange that most schools have not realized that at less than one-third of that expense the actual objects themselves would be directly in the school room or observed on the school grounds."

"It is hoped that the board will consider simple landscaping of the grounds. The new fence offers an opportunity for climbing roses, ivies, and for the planting of backgrounds of tall perennials. A small lily pool with goldfish in it is not beyond the possibilities of construction by junior high school students. In fact this is a frequent project for town and small city development by junior high school pupils."

"It would be distinctly unfair if we did not pay great tribute to the work of the local Red Cross public health nurse, as part of the program of the schools. Whereas, during this winter, neighboring towns and cities have seriously been handicapped by long protracted periods of pupil sickness, the attendance in the grades has been very high as a rule. The careful attention which Mrs. Pearson has given to the children, the prompt exclusion of children who might communicate troublesome children's diseases to other children, and the excellent follow-up work within the homes, account for this."

Attention is called to the need for more reference books such as pictured encyclopedias.

"The work in music has developed to a remarkable degree during the present school year. The children are being taught funda-mentals of rhythm, which is even more basal than rote singing. This assists us greatly not only in our plays and games, our physical exercise, but also carries over into handwriting and other skills which depend upon rhythm for speed and good form."

"We wish to close this report with a frank statement of the appreciation for your maintenance of a system which gives the individual teacher great latitude in following her own ideas, demanding only that results are shown. It is much happier working with considerable freedom in detail, provided that we feel sure that we are closely checked as to the progress we are making with this detail. The system as now organized gives the principal a complete, continuous survey of actual pupil achievement in consideration of pupil ability. It is not burdensome or we could not care for it in the small amount of time of three hours and three quarters each week."

"But it is pleasant to know that by any of the so-called yard sticks by which high ranking school systems measure their products I can assure the school board as I do the superintendent of schools positively as to the standing of any child or grade at any time the request is made. This was not so when nothing but teacher rating was used as an estimate for progress."

"It is also pleasant to assure you that this system apparently leaves no dark spots where information is lacking. It makes possible our insistence that the plans of supervision and the principal are strictly carried out, and I feel fairly well assured that there is no lack of information on which we can base our plans as to further procedure."

REPORT OF WEST PETERBOROUGH SCHOOL

The total enrollment is 63. Perhaps few schools are more fortunate in the cooperative spirit of the community and the teaching staff than is the case in Peterborough; and nowhere is this spirit better evidenced than at West Peterborough.

The records of the children who enter the upper six grades in the high school building are at par with those made by the pupils in the first six grades of the central school, when similar pupil abilities are considered.

The work at West Peterborough is done by the same plan of diagnosis and remedial teaching; and conferences with Miss McGrath and the superintendent of schools make available an interchange of material which reduces the cost.

The chemical toilets at West Peterborough which have been in service for about thirteen years are now in a condition which may require complete new installation.

The addition of electric lights has been a great help to the children's eyes.

The third room now acts as a playroom in inclement weather.

The spacious grounds in front of the school building would lend themselves to a development of a larger leveled area for playgrounds and perhaps landscaping of an inexpensive type could make this area even more interesting than it is at present.

The work in music and physical education is carried on with the same supervisors, so that we move in step with the grades at the central building.

The attendance in the school has been pleasingly high and we think that much credit should be given to the work of the Red Cross Public Health Nurse whose frequent visits and follow up service have assisted in keeping the health of the children above the average level.

Last year we had opportunity, on a few occasions, to see what visual education could do for children in the schools, and we hope that it will be possible to darken at least one room and provide more of this sort of interesting and informational work.

We are very grateful for the cooperation which we have received and are glad that the standing of the school speaks well of our work.

REPORT OF SCHOOL BOARD

This year more space is given than formerly to individual reports of supervision and teaching staff as rendered to the School Board. The citizens are urged to read them all with serious attention.

Any school system as a whole is chiefly the product of professional supervisory management. And its efficiency, its realization of objectives, its scholastic value—all are measured directly by the professional skill, a more or less adequate knowledge of subjects to be taught, and an intensity of interest, as exemplified by the personal qualities of the teaching staff. Hence, the very great need of unerring judgment in the choice of teachers, and the equally important asset of financial means with which to choose.

In many ways the achievements of the current year seem to illustrate the value of what the Board has tried to maintain—a steadily progressive educational policy, with the elimination of undermining superficialities.

To all officials concerned, departmental heads in particular, teachers of all regular and special subjects, the School Board expresses sincere appreciation of their loyalty, their unfailing and constantly persistent labor towards the realization of the educational ideals that are set before them.

To Mr. William H. Mayo is due the gratitude of the public for many years to come for the valuable collection of pictures given to the schools of Peterborough. There are nineteen in all, thus making it possible to hang one at least in every school room in town, not omitting the High School office.

The interest, the criticisms, and the assistance of the citizens are equally valued and solicited by the School Board, inasmuch as the public schools are the property of the taxpayers.

NOTE: Explanation of Appropriation.

The nurse's salary is $125.00 per month for ten months' service. The school district for the past three years has appropriated $1,000 for Health Supervision and Medical Inspection. This sum pays a school physician and for whatever supplies are used in the school work, First Aid, emergency service, etc., and the remainder goes towards the salary. The appropriation may pay seven months, varying according to other demands. The detail of expenditures is published in the school account.

All remaining expenses—salary, car service of $175.00, charity calls, medicine, etc.—are paid by the local Red Cross. Fees are accepted from patients who can pay, and are required and paid under Insurance cases, all receipts going directly to the local Red Cross treasurer.

PETERBOROUGH HYMN*A. D. 1620

God our Father!
 Glory, Lord, to Thee!
Before whose voice
 Is mute the thund'ring sea!
Through wind and foam
 Thou lead'st us home—
To Thee be glory through eternity.

Lord, hunger and cold are nigh!
Lord, not for ourselves we cry—
Let not our children die!
Silence your loud alarms
God is our shield from harms—
He will make strong our arms.
Christ, who hath calmed the wave,
Christ will uphold the brave.

Christ, our Saviour!
 Father of our Faith!
To Thee we bring faint hearts and failing breath,
 Be Thou our Guide!
 With Thee we bide,
To love, to labor, and to hope till death!

EDWARD MACDOWELL
